School Safety Tools and Planning in The Works before Academic Year

While ensuring the safety of students during the school day is never far from the minds of education and public safety officials, the tragic events in Uvalde, Texas last June have put school districts across the country back on high alert as summer vacation ends. Districts around the country are examining security and safety protocols and practices in advance of the new school year.

Officials in Ohio are awarding $47 million for...

New Federal Funding Announced for Disaster Recovery and Climate Resiliency

The White House and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) recently announced $1.16 billion in climate resilience funding will be available through grant programs that aim to help communities prepare and respond to climate-related disasters.

The selections include large resilience projects funded by the Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities (BRIC) national competition and Flood Mitigation Assistance (FMA) community-wide flood mitigation projects. Selections are from Fiscal Year 2021 funding round with $1 billion made available through BRIC and $160 million made available for Flood Mitigation Assistance.

"Climate change poses a very real threat to the safety, security, and prosperity of the United States," said Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro N. Mayorkas, in a release. "Its impacts are..."
