

Secret Service, Other Agencies Make Massive Security Moves in Preparation for Inauguration

Security preparations for the inauguration of President-elect Joe Biden are among the most robust in history after the site of the event—the U.S. Capitol—was breached on Jan. 6 during an insurrection by violent protestors that resulted in five deaths.

Under the command and coordination of the United States Secret Service, more than 20,000 National Guard troops will be supporting the FBI, the U.S. Marshals Service, thousands of police and members of other federal agencies as they attempt to...

Minneapolis Explores Public Safety Strategies

What law enforcement will look like in the wake of protests and riots that roiled the U.S. during the spring and summer of 2020 is an unanswered question. But, the city that spawned that unrest has advanced a proposal that would reorganize the Minneapolis Police Department, grouping it with other public safety programs under a new department.

Many communities are looking toward Minneapolis to see...

Security Industry Advocates Active on Capitol Hill in 2020

A global pandemic combined with massive summer protests over social justice issues and political upheaval at the end of the year (both which resulted in various levels of violence) made 2020 one of the most challenging years in recent history for security professionals. Advocates for the industry, however, did score some wins in Congress last year.

The government relations arm of the Security Industry Association (SIA) recently detailed some...
